Lately, I have been thinking about human intent in the era of a.i. and consequently developing my own thesis where I treat "the sentence." as a primary product primitive, from which the user-experience* is built upon.

*I led with technical jargon, but in human-speak, what we say matters. I say that in the face of agentic automation, not in spite of it, but aware, appreciative, albeit apprehensive in informing & influencing human wayfinding.

I stubbornly—and genuinely—believe human intent matters most, ifimaybefrank.com
