WORKING THESIS_2026 (current) /

“Lately, I have been thinking about human intent in the era of a.i. and consequently developing my own thesis where I treat ‘the sentence.’ as a core product primitive, from which the user-experience* is built upon.”— Zack G.

WORDS_from_co-workers /
Andrés Moros / then Sr. UX Designer at Publicis Sapient, now Senior Product Designer at ExxonMobil / "Zack is one of the most meticulous, hardworking, creative, and talented individuals I have ever had the pleasure to work with. He is always giving his best no matter the situation. Working with him is a pleasure, we would have some of the most efficient work sessions that I have experienced in my entire career. We would always move forward and come up with new ideas and hypotheses and we would go above and beyond our objective. It was a constant stream of ideas and creative solutions to problems. Zack is a team oriented individual: always looking to help others do their best (as he well puts it, to 'set them up for success'), because that's just the kind of selfless person that he is. Great team player, excellent designer, and an even better person." /

Christopher Bayle / then ACD UX at Publicis Sapient, now Creative Director, Experience Design at American Express / "Zack has a deep connection to emotions, imagination, and sensitivity—the quintessential idealist. He seems happy to roam his mental landscape of thoughts and emotion for hours on end. His greatest strength is his depth of sensitivity and empathy, which allows him to give voice to human connections in a way that works with people on a profound level. Zack brings a fresh perspective to things when I feel in a rut—a great person to work with." /
